Pastor's Perspective: What's your vision for 2022

Special to Pelachatchie News

By Guest Columnist John
Vaughn, Pastor, Cross
Roads Baptist Church

Here we are at the beginning of a New Year! 2022 is here with all the promise and potential that every New Year provides us. Of course, as with every New Year, there are many things that are beyond our control. But it is important to focus on what we can control. Among them are our attitudes, our conduct, our words, and our goals.

Great organizations and companies have vision and mission statements. They also have themes each year that are reflective of their goals. Whether it's a Fortune 500 company, a church or any other organization, it's important that everyone on the team knows what the goals are so they can work together towards achieving those goals. As a reminder, they put out a theme for the year to help everyone in the organization to remain focused on reaching the goals.

I think that same principle is important in our individual lives. We all need to have a vision about what we want to accomplish this year, and set some goals that will move us toward accomplishing the vision. Finally, having a personal theme for the year can help you stay focused on reaching your goals.

For those who are Believers, an appropriate source for choosing a theme for the year is God's Word. Let me suggest a few possibilities.

Ephesians 4:1 says, "Lead a life worthy of your calling." Contrary to what many believe, Ministers and Missionaries are not the only people that God "calls." Every person has been called to salvation, and every believer has been called to service. So every person should pray and seek to understand what God's calling is on your life. After you have determined what your "calling" is, you should resolve to "Lead a life worthy of that calling."

Another possible theme verse is John 3:30, which says, "I must decrease and He must increase."

If you were to choose this as your theme verse, then everything you do in 2022 should be reflected and measured by that verse. In every situation and decision you face, you should ask the question, "Will this be for my glory or for His?" If it's for your own glory, it will go against the theme verse and be detrimental to your overall goals.

"I must decrease and He must increase" means that you should put God's needs and will above your own. You should recognize that His message and will are more important than your own. This is not an easy theme to follow. It will go against human nature. But by trying to decrease so that the Lord can increase in your life, you will be more content and He will be glorified through you.

I Corinthians 2:16 is another possible theme verse. It says, "But we have the mind of Christ." If that were your theme verse, then you should carefully guard what enters your mind, because temptation often begins with our thoughts. And temptation leads to sin. So if you have the mind of Christ, you will constantly be monitoring what goes into your mind. Because what enters your mind as a thought often comes out as a sin!

These are just a few possibilities that could be used as a theme verse. Of course, any verse could serve that purpose. Why not pick one out. Choosing a verse can help you stay focused so that you can achieve the goals that God lays on your heart and accomplish all that God has for you to do this year!

Be sure to take your family to church on Sunday!

The Rankin County School Board announced Dr. Scott Rimes has accepted an offer to become the next district superintendent of the Rankin County School District (RCSD).

How to properly use car headlights

By Doug Carter, Rankin County Extension Agent

Special to Pelahatchie News

With the recent time change, we find ourselves driving more often after dark than we did previously. We also have to worry about deer being on the road. Sometimes cows are out and in the roadway, or limbs are on the road after a storm.

A lot of newer vehicles now have a feature to turn headlights on automatically when daylight starts to turn to dark. However, you must ensure your headlight switch is in the correct position for this to work properly. But automatic doesn't work for every condition. You may need to manually turn on headlights in adverse weather conditions such as rain, fog, or smoke.

We have all met vehicles that have the high beams on and temporary blind us. If an approaching vehicle is using high beams when they should not be or have those blue-white aftermarket bulbs (these headlights seem to be on high, even when on low), just keep your eyes focused to the right edge of the road to help avoid being blinded by their light, and stay in your lane.

Ensure your headlights are properly adjusted. This may be necessary if you have modified your vehicle by lowering or lifting the stance from stock height, or if you have replaced the original headlight housings.

Also, keep added on light bars and auxiliary lights turned off when on public roads with other vehicles.

When to use high or low beams:

- High Beams

High beams should be used when there are few or no streetlights on the road. High beams will help you see farther down the road, preventing you from hitting any animals or pedestrians crossing in front of you.

They should be used when you are not meeting or coming up behind another vehicle.

- Low Beams

Poor weather limits visibility during the day. (Using high beams in fog or rain is often more dangerous because of light reflection).

Use low beams when city driving at night when short-range light is sufficient, when another vehicle is approaching in the opposite direction, and when following another vehicle at night.

Headlights can quickly become dirty or, more often, cloudy from age. If the plastic headlight lenses are not routinely polished and maintained to a crystal-clear finish it can cause problems for all drivers. Aged, clouded headlight lens will cause a glare to oncoming vehicles. If the plastic headlight lenses are not routinely polished and maintained to a crystal-clear, finish it can cause problems for all drivers.

So, maintain your headlights by using a lens restoration product or replacing the headlight housing all together.

Happy New Year: Three things

Special to Pelahatchie News

*By Guest Columnist
Dr. Teague Burchfield,
Principal, Pelahatchie
High School*

Happy New Year! I hope you have had a restful Christmas Holiday with family and friends. As always, each new year brings a need to reflect on the successes and failures of the year's past with a want to goal set for what is to come. We should all ask ourselves "Where can we improve ourselves academically, emotionally, socially, and spiritually?" Having answers for these questions will provide clarity and fulfillment for what is to come.

As for Pelahatchie High School, we will continue to devote our time to instruction and student engagement. Expect a continued focus on the fundamentals of the classroom. How our classes begin, how we deliver instruction and transition during the lesson, as well as how we close a lesson and assess learning, will all be starting points for our staff as we look to improve ourselves in the upcoming year.

In turn, we ask that our students (and their families) aim to improve their practices as well. Being prompt to school each and every day, turning in classwork in a timely fashion, studying prior to an important exam, as well as respecting their neighbors and their opportunity to receive an appropriate education, all come to mind in this regard. Meeting these fundamental steps will prove rewarding as we close the '21-'22 school year.

In closing, and for ALL of us to consider, I would like to borrow a few words from legendary football coach Lou Holtz. As he was receiving the "NCFAA Contributions to College Football" award just a few weeks ago, he delivered three simple, yet effective, expectations for his audience that night. Coach Lou Holtz said...

1. "Do the Right Thing"
2. "Do the Best You Can"
3. "Always Show Folks You Care"

Well said...Let's ALL follow through!
Happy New Year & Go Chiefs!

The 2021 Pelahatchie 'A Hometown Christmas Parade' was held Saturday, January 4, featuring bands, floats, fire and police trucks, kids, cars, candy, and, of course, Santa.

The Pelahatchie High School (PHS) Army ROTC led the parade with the

The Parade judges were District 4 Rankin County Supervisor Steve Gaines and City Attorney Kimberly Banks. They awarded first place to the Priority One Bank float whose theme was "We treat you like family." Second place went to The Percolator Coffee Shop featuring "warm chocolate marshmallow wishes for the holiday season." Third was won by Pelahatchie Baptist Church's the "greatest gift of Christmas is Jesus."

The parade also included community groups DEM Drummer Boys percussion group and The Jazzios musicians. It also featured a group of Ford mustangs called the Wicked Stangs of Mississippi, Pleasant Hill MB Church, Elmore Township, The Service Station, Central Mississippi Antique Association's antique tractors, Tyler McCrory and the Watson family.

The Pelahatchie Volunteer Fire Department also hosted a Pancakes with Santa that morning in the Community Center.
